THE NTIA SUMMER SOLSTICE TRADE FESTIVAL: POST EVENT REFLECTION

It seems such a short time ago that we delivered our Summer Solstice Trade Festival at Dinerama in Shoreditch, bringing together so many engaged businesses to celebrate success and discuss challenges faced by the NTE across the country.

We were lucky enough to have Dan Davies Chairperson of The Institute of Licensing & Rockpoint Leisure as a keynote speaker, who has been an inspiration not only as a leading representative of the Hospitality and Licensing Sector, but a resident of Liverpool's New Brighton who has committed to regenerating the area. Giving back to the community through his success! I would urge you if you haven't already to take a look at the amazing work that Dan and his team has done as part of the Rockpoint Leisure project in New Brighton.

We posed a question to our panelists regarding the 'The Importance of the NTE in the Regeneration of the High Street' , with a varied panel of professionals and operators the discussion followed a level of disbelief in terms of the current business levels within the High Street, derelict shop fronts and the blame placed squarely on the change in consumer behaviour. It also delved into the responsibilities of the Local Government authorities in terms of regretting high streets and foreseeing a growing changing in consumer behaviour over several years but with no strategy to combat or accommodate for changing the landscape...

A DAY IN THE LIFE AT LISA LASHES SCHOOL OF MUSIC - Supporting CIRV

Lisa Lashes School of Music supported by the NTIA are working on several key initiatives for the first time in the UK alongside the Police and agencies, starting in Northampton with Chief Inspector Lyons.

We are very excited to work alongside the school in the development and support of young students through music, and we hope to encourage them to actively work towards a career within the Night-Time Economy.

A Day in the Life of Lisa Lashes School of Music

Early morning. The Platform club and café in Northampton. The first day of a new cohort of learners at the Lisa Lashes School of Music.

It's a weekday so the café is quiet. The barista is stocking up the fridge and only the TVs are making sounds, blaring out the soft tones of chart music.

Slowly the tutors arrive, sparing a nod in my direction before they rush off to set up equipment and prepare things for the students. And then, of course, the legend that is Lisa Lashes whirls in with a stack of folders and a flash of green hair. Deborah arrives soon after and lesson plans are handed out. They fill the coffee shop with energy, truly these ladies are something special.

Students begin to trickle in through the doors, some of them have met before on taster days or the sign-up day, and there's eager anticipation written on their faces. Lisa and Deborah greet the students warmly as they arrive (some of them are awe-struck by the feisty woman in heels who became the face of electronic music)...
